ABSTRACT

DE LA REVOLUCIÓN DE LA INFORMACIÓN: ¿QUÉ ÉTICA PARA LA SOCIEDAD DE RED?

En un mundo inundado de información, el desarrollo disruptivo de la tecnología nos enfrenta al desafío tecnológico, uno de los más grandes que jamás haya enfrentado nuestra especie.

Inconscientemente hemos envuelto el mundo en torno a las TIC, hasta el punto de convertirlas en fuerzas ambientales, antropológicas, sociales e interpretativas, que crean y forjan nuestra realidad física e intelectual, modifican nuestra autocomprensión, cambian la forma en que nos relacionamos otros y con nosotros mismos.

Hacen todo esto de una manera penetrante, profunda e incesante, creando una profunda revolución cultural. La revolución de la información, de hecho, ejerce una presión sin precedentes sobre el comportamiento y la ética individuales.

Debemos ser capaces de permitirnos el lujo de hacer una pausa para reflexionar un momento sobre la dirección que está tomando lo digital y preguntarnos si nuestro sentido ético podría estar desactualizado.

Pero, ¿qué es lo correcto ante una situación sin precedentes? La Cuarta Revolución planteó el Problema Ético de reconfigurar la ética clásica en Ethics by Design, en el que son centrales una serie de preguntas sobre el comportamiento moral de la Sociedad Hipershistórica, en torno a temas como la confianza, la privacidad, la transparencia, la libertad, respeto, confiabilidad.

El cambio es la única constante. Las personas necesitan herramientas críticas para interpretar la información, para distinguir lo que es importante de lo que es irrelevante y para poder enmarcar toda la información en un escenario más amplio y tomar las decisiones correctas. Solo así podremos contribuir a mejorar la sociedad.
